

Stelian Stefanov Parushev

Lead Engineer
Protection Systems in HV Projects
Siemens Energy

Stelian Stefanov Parushev has nine years of experience in HVDC and HVAC electrical power transmission and possesses comprehensive knowledge of electrical power systems and deep experience in the design, commissioning, and maintenance of AC protection systems of high-voltage substations and transmission lines. As lead engineer, he is currently responsible for the design of protection systems and automation solutions for high-voltage substations, research in the field of digitalization of protection and automation of the power grid, technical consulting of partners, internal stakeholders, and customers, and leads the execution of protection system designs.